The “butts” stop here.

If you are 50, you are at risk for colon cancer. So, it's time to stop making excuses – you need to get screened.

If you have any family history of colon cancer or polyps, or if you are experiencing certain digestive symptoms, you need to get screened no matter your age.

You can probably think of plenty of reasons to avoid getting screened. But, colon cancer is the second deadliest form of cancer.

Make no butts about it — a colonoscopy could save your life.

Visit StopColonCancerNow.com to find a screening location near you and schedule your colonoscopy today.
